JUNIOR VOLUNTEERS IN AROOSTOOK

In order to avoid any misunderstanding in regard to the place which the Junior Volunteers occupy in the labor situation of Aroostook County I am taking this opportunity to make known to the farmers and employers of the Volunteers the ideals and expectations of the Leaders of this Movement, which I am sure will be backed up by the Director-General and by the Governor of the State of Maine.

The reason for the organization of the Junior Volunteers is because of a shortage in labor caused by the fact that labor from outside of the United States, upon which we have ordinarily depended, is no longer available. The available labor in our own country is being diminished every day as a result of our entrance into the great European struggle, but none of our loyal Americans wish it otherwise. We are all in this struggle with the intention and expectation of remaining to the finish to see our country victorious and the ideals for which Americans and her Allies stand become predominant in the world. On account of the shortage of labor the Governor has seen fit to call for a mobilization of the young men who are not old enough to take part in the war. These boys, brought together from the finest homes in Maine, are here on the farms because they desire to add their bit to the common cause. I personally know of boys who are now working a good long day, for a boy, on farms in Aroostook County, who have given up positions where they could have had $2.50 to $3.00 a day and much shorter hours than they are now enjoying, and the reason that they have done this is because of their love for their country and their desire, like the soldier, and the sailor, to do their duty in a time of need.

It is not the intention of the Governor of the State, nor of the Leaders of this Movement, that these boys should take the place of men where men are available. It is simply to supply the shortage in labor in so far as we are able and the boys are not expected to do man's work for much less pay than is given to the experienced laborer in this County. I fear that some farmers have not the right conception of this Movement, and from my personal observation I am quite sure that some have made the mistake of thinking that they could dispense with their more experienced and costly labor and fill their places with boys at less expense to themselves and drive the boys to the full length of day usually made by the farm hand. It is expected by the Leaders of this Movement that the boys will be looked upon and used as you would wish your own boys to be on the farms of southern Maine if the needs of the Nation should place them there. They are young gentlemen in all that that term means. They are not above work, in fact they want to work, and are willing to work, but there ought to be good judgment used by all farmers and I think in most cases this is being done; in regard to the number of hours and the amount of work which these boys can do. I hope it will be understood that these boys are not hardened and able to do the day's work of the experienced farm hand and follow them in the hours of labor. As Leaders of these boys we have tried to inspire them with the spirit of doing well what they are called upon to do, and to follow the directions of their employer to the letter.

I am not publishing this letter in any spirit of criticism, but simply for information that it may be clearly understood on both sides why these boys are here, and what may be expected from them.

I am glad to say that so far my experience has been that the farmers understand very clearly what the boys are capable of doing and are not urging them beyond their ability, but a few cases have come to my attention, not necessarily in my own immediate field, where boys are being exploited by an apparently unreasonable farmer. It is our business as Leaders, and our privilege, to remove boys from any place where we consider the boy is not receiving due care and attention or is being overworked, and this we shall do without fear or favor. If there is a question in the mind of any farmer who has a Junior Volunteer as to what he can reasonably demand he can very easily find out by simply coming to the Leader, or Captain of the group, who will be very glad to take up the whole matter with him and explain what may be expected.

Cooperation between the farmer and the Leader must exist, and no case of greed or avarice can be tolerated. We must understand that this is an emergency measure, not to help some one to make a little more money, but that we might produce more food crops for the benefit of suffering humanity.

We are proud of Aroostook and the splendid record she has made so recently, and we wish to enter our plea for the Junior Volunteers that no mistake be made in regard to them. May we be taken in the spirit in which we come; the spirit of cooperation.

--Leader of Presque Isle Group.

Dr. A. B. Libby, who was at the Aroostook Hospital several months for surgical treatment has recovered sufficiently to return to his home in Smyrna Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Adams left here Thursday for Springfield, Mass., where Mr. Adams will enter upon his duties as travelling salesman for The Wilson Company.

The locomotive attached to the C. P. R. train to Dehec, Wednesday morning went off the iron at Elmwood. No damage was done more than a delay of about one hour in travel.

Clarence Trumble, a well known and prominent business man of Calais, was in Houlton Friday, by auto. Mr. Trumble is well known here where he made many friends when a travelling salesman through Aroostook.

Dr. H. B. Jervis, formerly of this town, but now having headquarters in South Carolina was in Houlton, Thursday, for a brief visit. Dr. Jervis has enlisted in the veterinarian department of the U. S. Medical unit. He now has the rank of 2nd Lieut. and has been assigned to duty, for the present, in Montana.

The Board of Trustees of Tuberculosis Sanatorium will be at the Snell House, Houlton, Saturday, July 28, for the purpose of considering a location of a state sanatorium in the county of Aroostook. The last legislature appropriated the sum of $20,000 for this purpose, provided a site should be furnished by the people. Members of the board are as follows: Dr. T. E. Hardy, Waterville; T. H. Johnson, Portland; Dr. C. H. Bayard, Orono; Stanley Bisbee, Rumford; Kingsbury B. Piper, Fairfield.

One thing Sheriff Dunn certainly cannot complain of, and that is that the press of the county denies him any latitude in the explanations he has to make growing out of his Sunday food and thirst campaign. Men whose stomachs are denied the cool refreshment of a glass of soda or ginger ale on a hot Sunday in summer will kick; the combined and collective kick of 2,000 thus denied is that much more effective than the protest of a single individual. If he has many more boomerang experiences like that in connection with the grangers Sunday excursion to Houlton, Sheriff Dunn will have to start a neat little sheet of his own and call it either The Explanatory Bulletin or Dunn's Weekly Vindicator.

WARNING TO POTATO SHIPPERS AND POTATO HOUSE MEN

At a meeting held in Caribou on July 17 our attention has been very forcibly called to the matter of the condition of potato houses, by Underwriters, as well as the Federal and State Governments.

Special reductions in rates are made by the Underwriters for improvements, but the vital question which alarms this Government is the conservation of the food products and radical steps will be taken by the Government to protect the potato crop unless the owners and shippers attend to these matters at once.

Call on your local Fire Insurance Agent and he will furnish the proper regulations of the Railroads, Government, and Underwriters.

RED CROSS

The Red Cross work in this town is now being actively carried on the surgical dressing work in the Meduxnekeag Club rooms and the sewing in Watson Hall.

Much work has been accomplished in the two months since organization, still much more could be done with more workers, and the need is very great.

At first there was some delay in getting sufficient materials, but now there are stacks of work all cut out and ready for workers. Watson Hall with all its comforts and conveniences has been turned over to the Red Cross workers, by Bishop Brewster who made a special trip here two or three weeks ago for that purpose.

The meetings for work are held every Tuesday and Friday afternoon in both places and every woman in town is urged to come and offer her services, those who can sew, to Watson Hall; those who cannot, can find plenty of work at the Meduxnekeag Club rooms. Yarn and cotton for knitting is given out at Watson Hall with instructions for knitting, also sewing given out to take home. Remember, every Tuesday and Friday afternoon should be given up to Red Cross work.

WELL KNOWN IN HOULTON

The young friends in Houlton of Lieut. J. C. Hanson of the 104th Canadian Battalion will be sorry to learn of his death from accident in France. Lieut. Hanson was connected with the aviation corps. His death was due to an aeroplane accident the nature of which was unknown.

In the winter of 1915-16 he was stationed at Woodstock. He was a popular in Houlton's young social life.

SENTENCED TO SCHOOL FOR BOYS

The young youths, Harry Cyr, John Paul, Hardy Robinson, were brought before Judge Carroll, Wednesday, charged with breaking and entering. They were found guilty and sentenced by the Court to State School for Boys.

The cases were appealed and bonds furnished for appearance at the November term of Court.

It is the opinion of those interested in the boys that Judge Carroll acted wisely in imposing sentence, and the best interests of the boys are not served by the appeal entered.

O. E. S. FIELD DAY

There was a large gathering of members of the Aroostook County Eastern Star Association for their annual picnic at Nickerson Lake, Wednesday. All sections of the County sent large delegations for this event.

The day was an ideal one, and ideal days are rare now, for this event which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres., Margaret Pennington, Houlton; Secretary, Mrs. Mary Oak, Presque Isle; Treas., Mrs. Alice Pettengill, Island Falls.

It was voted to hold the 1918 field day at Crescent Park.

TEAMS MUST CARRY LIGHTS

All teams, except hay, wood, stone and some other heavy teams, must carry at least one light so that it can be plainly seen from both front and rear. Arrest and fine are the penalties for failure to do this. This Association has sent posters to all post offices, livery stables and garages, with request that they be posted, and has written the mayors and city marshals in cities and chiefs of police in towns, asking that the law be enforced. The motorists, however, must see that the law is enforced in their respective localities.

We ask every motorist when passing a team without lights to cry out, "Where is your light?"

By J. C. Seates, Sec'y-Treas. Maine Automobile Association

SMALL POTATOES

The public as well as every licensed automobile driver knows that all monies received from automobile registrations go towards building and maintaining the roads which are constantly being used by these motorists.

The automobile inspector and other officials of Houlton are having a great deal of annoyance from people prominent in this community, who have bought new cars, some of the same make as the old ones, and some different makes, who have put on the old registration number, and are running their new cars in violation of the law, all to save the paltry sum of $2.00, or in other words, deprive the state out of what justly belongs to it.

The town officials know who these people are and they have or will be dealt with according to law.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING

There was a special meeting of the Aroostook County Board of Fire Underwriters held in Odd Fellows Hall, Caribou, on Tuesday. Agents in the county, other than local agents, who were present were Geo. T. Holyoke of Houlton, N. E. Perry, Geo. W. Perry, C. P. Allen of Presque Isle, C. W. Perry and E. J. Lowery of Fort Fairfield, L. V. Thibodeau of Van Buren and Paul D. Thibodeau of Fort Kent.

The following officers were elected:

President F. E. Peabody, Houlton
Vice Pres. W. R. Lumbert, Caribou
Secretary A. A. Gardin, Caribou
Treasurer M. B. McKay, Houlton

The Aroostook county committee was represented by M. E. Bartlett and Frank W. Alden of Waterville, Geo. E. McChamber of Augusta, John T. Horan of Boston, M. Field of Belfast and other special agents.

Among the matters discussed was the all important one of remedying the defects in potato warehouses. This move is along the lines of good conservation, and will be insisted upon by all insurance companies and no company will write risks on storehouses, after October 1, which have not been thoroughly corrected as to the existing defects.

The recent "hoist" in rates was due to existing defects and it is highly important to owners, shippers and the public in general that these matters be attended to immediately.

—Republican.

MR. HOOVER TO AROOSTOOK

Herbert C. Hoover, national food administrator is soon to make a trip to this County, in the interests of food conservation. He will look over the crop situation here and get a line on what Aroostook can do this fall in the way of feeding the world.

It is now planned that at some central point in the County, Mr. Hoover will address the people on the great question of food conservation. It is expected that Gov. Milliken, and Pres. Todd of the Bangor & Aroostook, will be present with Mr. Hoover.

AROOSTOOK FURNISHES MOST MEN ON THE DRAFT

Maine's gross quota for the draft was 7664 and the State is credited with enlistments in the guard and regular army numbering 5243, leaving 1821 men to be drafted. The credits include National guard enlistments prior to April 1st, and up to June 30th, while the army enlistments for which credit is given began with April 1st, and end with June 30th.

According to the revised figures Aroostook was called upon to furnish 434 men; 217 in the first division and 222 in the second division.

According to the figures given out this County had to furnish more men for the draft than any other County in the State. It is claimed that leading men of the County have been discouraging enlistments in the County on the ground that one could do better service for the government by working on the farm and helping increase the food supply.

DISASTROUS FIRE FOR B. &amp; A.

At 9:30 o'clock, Thursday night fire broke out in the Bangor & Aroostook round house at Oakfield, completely destroying the structure and nine locomotives in the building. The locomotives burned were of the best in the freight class owned by this Company. There were three of the 180 type and one of the 90 type, considered the most powerful of freighters.

The origin of the fire is not known. It burned with such fierceness, because of the oil and grease smeared structure, the men were unable to get out any of the machines in the house.

Coming at this time, when skilled labor is scarce, and the time rapidly approaching when the crops will have to be moved to market, the B. & A. finds itself in a hard position. All locomotive shops are now rushed to capacity and it will be some time before the B. & A. locomotives can be made ready for service.

The management will put forth every effort to secure motive power so that Aroostook will not suffer from delay in moving goods to market.

Legal Newspaper Decisions

1.—Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his address or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the payment of the paper. If he fails to pay, the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not.

2.—If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not.

3.—The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of fraud. If you want to stop your paper, write to the publisher yourself, and don't leave it to the post-master.

CONSCRIPTION

The approach of the day of conscription for the new National army finds the American people displaying a spirit of patriotism and loyalty to their Government which will prove a source of National pride during all generations. The conscription idea is based upon the theory that all citizens are due to bear their part of the National burden, and that universally men must take up arms, when it is necessary to do so, for the defense of the Country. The readiness with which so many thousands of young men entered their names upon the registration lists on the 5th of June, last, is proof of the acceptance of the theory upon which conscription is based, and leads unquestionably to the conclusion that the new National army, raised thus, will fully perform its duties and prove a credit to America and to humanity.

The spirit which animates our men, and which rules in our homes, which are to be called upon to lose the flower of our young manhood, is all the more to be praised because of the evidence of bad faith in Washington where, according to the statements made by senators from both political sides of the chamber, duplicity has been practiced, and actual dishonesty in vogue, in order that the South might escape its proper representation in the draft and the North be made to bear an undue share. This is not a question of party politics, for administration senators have openly made the charge on the floor of the Senate, and have called upon Secretary Redfield to produce before the Senate the system of estimates, the publication of the results of which have turned out so astonishingly.

We do not anticipate that even the United States Senate will be able to get much satisfaction from the gentlemen whom President Wilson permits to preside over the Department of Labor and Commerce in the National Cabinet. But the accident of power in a Cabinet officer is only temporary. The principles underlying the cause for which our Country fights is eternal and all the bad faith, all the inefficiency being displayed in Washington will not drown the conviction, that our war is one for justice and humanity, and that its course must be carried to a triumphant finish.

NOT BUSINESS LIKE

Impressions which people casually get in one way, often influence them in forming opinions and prejudices for or against a town, a business or an individual. While really the occasion or incident is no criterion for judging it nevertheless passes as such and the one who is judged suffers on account of this. Many Houlton merchants are unintentionally offenders simply as a result of their generosity and co-operation. This is in respect to the way in which they permit their store windows to continue to advertise a public event even after it has taken place.

It is a well known fact that Houlton merchants are exceedingly courteous and generous in allowing placards advertising musicals and other events to be placed in the windows of their stores. This is very commendable and for this they are to be complimented and thanked. But is there not a danger to their good reputation in many merchants allowing these cards to remain in the window after the musical or other feature advertised has passed. A ride or walk through the principal business section of the town often discloses many past events still advertised by the placard which has served its purpose.

"The danger is here. Unfairly or otherwise, many get the impression that the merchant thus displaying or allowing the display of a card in his window does not keep watch of his own windows. They are apt to say that if he does not keep a closer watch of the cards it is an indication that the goods displayed in the windows are no more carefully shown and therefore his stock cannot be right up to date. Not every merchant is an offender in this respect. In fact, comparatively few of them are. But there are some who can very properly give this matter regular attention. It is something that is allowed through an inadvertence rather than being due to any pronounced lack of business enterprise. If would-be customers get a favorable impression from windows that are given attention to the last detail, the opposite impression is likely if such attention is not given.

PROSPECTS GOOD

The crop situation looks pretty good for the United States, although it remains to be seen just what the future has in store along this line. The farmer is surely doing his part in securing good crop returns, planting increased acreage and also increasing the production in certain lines which will mean really contributing to food conservation. There is also the fact that the people of the Country in general are complying with suggestions which will secure the conservation of food supplies.

The reports which have been sent out from Washington are very encouraging. The predictions are the usual forecasts which are sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture at this season, and from time to time during the crop growing season. They are based upon fairly accurate estimates received from all sections of the United States, compiled by experts whose experience contributes to their efficiency in arriving at reasonably accurate estimates.

Crop prospects are good. The farmer is the factor whose work will count mightily in the winning of the war. He will keep England and other European neighbors who are fighting the great fight against the autocrats of Europe. That the world realizes how much depends upon the American farmer is evident in the articles that appear in the magazines and the newspapers. He is the king pin of the great contest of the hour, and he is proving the reliable man he has always been known to be.

Crop prospects indicate that the American farmer will raise not far from six billion bushels of grain. These cover the principal food products which are raised on the farm. The bumper crops of 1912 may be reached, and it is pretty sure prophesy that the production will show an increase over last year's big crop production of 541,000,000. The total acreage of the Country is 14 per cent greater than it was last year, and there is every reason why this should not mean a very marked increase in the total produced with weather conditions continuing favorable.

FIRE LOSSES INCREASE

Fire losses in the United States and Canada continue on the increase in spite of the fire prevention campaigns and safer and saner fourths. In 1915 these amounted to $12,836,200, while in 1916 the total losses reached $23,142,995. Successive months show relative increases in losses, with now and then a month falling below or showing a big increase. For instance, June, 1915, had fire losses of $10,892,950; June, 1916, $12,247,500, while June of this year amounted to $15,513,270. In none of these, as far as we can recall, was the increase due to conflagration. It may therefore be considered as normal, so to speak.

The relative increase is very consistently realized in the figures for the first six months periods of the three years. Fire losses totaled $92,391,000 the first six months of 1915; jumped to $125,776,420 the corresponding period of 1916, while the first half of this year they aggregated $144,621,725. If this proportion of increase maintains for the rest of this year there is every reason to believe that it will reach a total for fire losses for the year of not far from $275,000,000.

Of course, much of this increase in fire loss figures can undoubtedly be explained by the increased valuation placed upon the property and goods burned. Fire insurance experts consider a fire loss of one dollar per capita as reflecting favorably upon the fire prevention and fire fighting facilities of a city. The totals given represent a per capita of not far from $1.50, which may be considered excessive. Many cities are successful in keeping their fire losses down to the dollar mark and some even better than this. In view of this what can be said of the other cities? It evidently speaks for a carelessness on the part of property owners and other citizens relative to co-operating in fire prevention work and also indicates inadequate fire fighting facilities. Both are important in keeping down fire losses, which are a part of the National waste that should be reduced.

Fear Spiritual Weakness.

Fear is simply spiritual weakness, which may be compared to nervous weakness of the body. In other words, it is lack of spiritual sense of strength. And, as you know, spiritual strength comes from right morals, just as physical strength comes from right living. A keen sense of being right drives out all fear. Hence a certain triumph of the defenders of right over their opponents, even in spite of superior numbers.

The Kaffir Singing Boys

THESE boys have come from the heart of Africa, from Kaffrland, where they were found by J. H. Balmer, taught the rudiments of speech and in time trained as singers. They have made a great name for themselves. No other such company has come out of Africa. They were idolized in London and in Liverpool, where they sang to thousands. A reception was given in their honor on the steps of the House of Parliament, the first reception of its kind in all the history of Britain. J. H. Balmer was an engineer, a member of the colonial engineers' corps. He went into Africa for his health, became interested in teaching the native boys to sing, organized a singing band and became famous in the world over. The boys will appear here on the closing day of the Chautauqua. Their program will be a song and story demonstration of native African scenes. They will wear native costumes made of the skins of African animals, the lion, cheetah, leopard and other animals.

THE TIME TO ECONOMIZE

If we spend ten billion dollars a year, or anything like that sum, on war, economizing finally will be no matter of choice, but unavoidable necessity.

There is a limit to what the labor power of the United States can produce. That labor power was employed pretty well toward the limit last year. But spending billions on war means making a great many things that we did not make in peace; for example, a vast quantity of uniforms, blankets, tents, some additional millions of tons of steel in ship plates, cannon, and so on. At the same time, it means withdrawing the labor of a million men from production. We cannot do that and do all we did before.

When a man spends a dollar he is, in effect, hiring that labor which produced the article he buys. If he spends it for a luxury he is hiring labor to make and sell that luxury. If the demands of war prove to be as great as now seems likely, and if a great deal of labor is devoted to the production of luxuries, obviously there will not be enough for necessary production. So far we insist by our purchases upon superfluous production, we make necessary production more difficult and expensive. Every man who spends a dollar for luxury is drawing something out of a general stock that is barely adequate to the vital demands which will probably be made upon it.

If the demands of war are what they seem likely to be, we must economize finally, whether we want to or not. Extravagance up to the point where rational economy becomes compulsory will simply postpone, complicate and aggravate the adjustment.

WHAT ANOTHER GENERATION DID

Paste this in your hat against the next invitation to subscribe to Liberty bonds: In 1861 the population of the Northern States was little over twenty millions, their wealth about eleven billion dollars and their yearly income three billions.

In 1863, after two years of costly and generally unfortunate war, and after the Treasury Department had tried every regular means at its command to dispose of five hundred million dollars of "five-twenty" government bonds and had failed, Jay Cooke "secured the influence of the American press" and sent hundreds of agents all over the country drumming up subscriptions to the bonds by an office-to-office and house-to-house canvass. As a result of the popular interest so excited, "before the machinery thus set in motion could be stopped, Cooke had sold eleven million more bonds than had been authorized, an excess which Congress immediately sanctioned." In the fore part of 1865, by the same methods, Cooke sold eight hundred million dollars of government bonds. "As a result of these efforts, the Union soldiers were well supplied and promptly paid while dealing the final blows of the war; and later, with money in their pockets, they were disbanded without difficulty."

The quoted passages are from the Encyclopaedia Britannica's biography of Cooke.

The population of the United States now exceeds a hundred millions; its wealth is more than two hundred billion dollars; its yearly income at least forty billions.

At the next bond offering, do not wait for a drummer to come to your door. Do not cause the graybeards who fought the Civil War to blush for you!

ROADS FOR WAR AND PEACE

Washington, D. C., July 24. "We must as a nation wake up to the fact that roads are not only necessary in times of peace, but are of the greatest importance for the mobilization of armies in times of war," asserts State Highway Commissioner George

P. Coleman of Virginia, who is also president of the American Association of State Highway Officials, with which organization the American Automobile Association cooperated in the passage of the Federal Aid Road Act.

"A marginal highway, as set forth in the Chamberlain-Dent bill, along the Atlantic coast, the Gulf of Mexico, the Southwest border, and the Pacific slope, and, later, along the Northern boundary line, should receive the endorsement of all the people in this country interested in its protection, and its future development. All of us are possibly alive to the fact that roads are necessary for military purposes, but very few people realize that in the construction of the important highways of this country many years will be consumed. Therefore, it is important that this great work should be started at an early date and pushed with as great rapidity as possible to its final completion.

"While main artery roads command priority and require rugged and costly construction, the tributaries must not be neglected, for in many instances these 'feeder' roads upon occasion serve a vital purpose even though not subjected to heavy traffic except intermittently. If the National government relieves a state of that road which has the greatest military obligation, it still remains the bounden obligation of the commonwealth to supply a comprehensive state system of the most important inter-county roads, and then to give some aid to the counties in the building and maintenance of the lesser roads. It is almost impossible to say positively what roads may meet the military emergencies, and in consequence there must be a correlated plan, the cost of which must be shared by the National government and state and county."

"It has been suggested that war prisoners can be logically employed in military road construction, and one finds himself very much inclined to agree with the suggestion of the National Committee on Prisons that we utilize whatever foreign prisoners we now or will possess. Most of these men will undoubtedly be kept in Southern states where the need of trunk road construction awaits the earliest possible attention."

UNSHAKEN TESTIMONY

Time is the test of truth. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test in Houlton. No Houlton resident who suffers backache, or annoying kidney ills can remain unconvinced by this twice-told testimony.

Mrs. Walter Hartford, 25 Riverside St., Houlton, says: "I was compelled to go to bed on account of the terrible aching through my back, in fact all through my body. I had no ambition and a depressed bearing down feeling clung to me night and day. I tried different medicines, but wasn't able to obtain even temporary relief. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. They gave me quicker relief and more lasting benefit than any medicine I had ever used." (Statement given June 24, 1918.)

LASTING BENEFIT

On November 15, 1915, Mrs. Hartford said: "Since giving my former endorsement in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, I have never had a symptom of kidney trouble. What I said at that time, I repeat today. I will continue to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as strongly today as when I first endorsed them."

Price 60¢, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills (the same that Mrs. Hartford has twice publicly recommended). Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y.

A BAC SPRING FOR WOMEN

The late cold, and damp spring seems to have caused much suffering from backache, rheumatic pains, aches and pains in these parts, and muscles, lumbago and such ailments. Mrs. T. J. Buckle, Houlton, writes: "I am recovering from an attack of lumbago by the aid of Foley Kidney Pills. They surely help me."

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Will you please explain what harm will occur by using the motor as a brake on hills?

The practice of using the motor for a brake puts more tooth pressure between the gears than occurs when ordinarily driving the car. If you were to turn by hand a train of gears which instead of having a reduction of four to one had, on the contrary, a stepped up ratio of one to four you would notice the difference in pressure required to turn the gears. It takes the same amount of power applied over the same length of time to bring a car to rest as it does to bring it up to a given speed—that is, the amount of work done is the same—so it is true to state that if the stop is made in the same distance the gear wheels are transmitting the same amount of power. Where the factor of increased tooth pressure enters is that instead of having a reduction to work with of four to one, as in driving a car, the ratio becomes one to four in stopping it. Thus the proportion becomes similar in many respects to two inclined planes. If you had to drive a plane which had a slope of one to four by pressing vertically downward upon it it would not move nearly as readily as one which had a slope of from four to one, and, while this analogy is not accurate, it expresses the condition which occurs when the teeth of the small bevel gear sustain the pressure that they do when the drive comes through them in an inverse direction. With a worn and gear this analogy is quite accurate.

Why does carbon form in the cylinders of my car? For ten months I have been driving it. About every two weeks I have to clean the carbon from the cylinders. Is this necessarily caused by bad mixture? I have tried everything.

Your trouble may not be due to the mixture. It may be due to using poor cylinder oil or too much of it. If it is due to bad mixture it should be possible to adjust the carburetor to give a mixture not so rich, which would remedy the trouble. If a black smoke is given off at exhaust—indicating that the mixture is too rich—under all adjustments of the carburetor, the installation of any arrangement for giving additional air may help.

Will you please explain in detail the cause and remedy of the trouble with a gasoline motor when the cylinders are flooded and it will not start. What I mean is, why is it so difficult to start an engine after the cylinder has been overprimed, and I wish to know how one can tell when it is overprimed and what is the quickest way of remedying it?

The cause of hard starting with a flooded motor is that a mixture too rich to ignite is drawn into the cylinders—that is, there is not sufficient air mixed with the gasoline vapor. Turning the engine over a few times will relieve the trouble.

Should all starter and motor armatures have an air space around them and not touch as the armature in the magneto? Magneto armatures do not touch anything. Neither do those of motors or generators. They could not operate if they did.

Will you please suggest a method of sealing a frost crack in a cast water jacket? There is a double crack on the lower side and a single crack on the upper extending horizontally along the center. The inside of the cylinder is not injured. I understand that a saturated solution of sulphate of copper, blue vitriol, will do the work, but do not know the proportions. Can you tell me?

A most satisfactory method of rusting up a cracked cylinder is to use sal ammoniac. Take half a pound of pulverized sal ammoniac, mix it with half a gallon of water and boil. Pour this into the cylinder jacket and let it stand overnight. Drain this out on the following morning and allow the jacket to stand idle for a day, during which time the rusting to fill the crack should take place. Plain ammonia has been used, but not with so great success. When used a pint of pure ammonia is mixed with a pint of water, or double quantities if desired, and the jacket filled. It should be allowed to stand for a couple of days at least, when the jacket is drained and an opportunity left for the rusting to take place. A 50 per cent solution of ammonia will also serve.

My batteries run down very quickly. I use them only to start the motor, and then I switch to the magneto, and they play out very fast. Can you tell me what causes this?

This is usually caused by a short circuit in the ignition wiring or switch, or, if a storage battery, it may be due to sulphated plates.

What is wrong when advance of the spark lever to the top of the sector cuts off the current to the plugs?

This might be due to several causes. If the car has magneto ignition it might be due to weak magnets, or it might be caused by a weak coil, whether you have magneto or battery ignition. The distributor might be out of time with the specifications of the engine. Possibly the gears are too far advanced when the spark lever is retarded or in normal position, so that when the lever is brought way up on the quadrant it puts the ignition entirely off. However, it is seldom or ever that the running conditions require the spark lever being brought to the top of the quadrant or to the extreme opposite and to the position it is in when the spark is fully retarded. Usually when the spark lever is fully retarded at the bottom of the quadrant the best running position is three-quarters of the way up.

When storing a car is it better to put the top up or leave it down?

Standing for a long time in a folded condition, the top is likely to get creased and damaged, so when storing a car it is advisable to put the top up, thus allowing it to remain in smooth shape against cracking or creasing of the material. Besides this, the top will catch much of the dust which would ordinarily settle on the upholstery. Still better for the upholstery would be a sheet or tarpaulin spread over it. This is especially true if the upholstery is cloth or any cloth preparation. Dust of several months is not easy to get out of the weave, and it never does any fabric any good. Even in the folds of the leather it is hard to remove.

My car does not climb hills very well on high gear, and I am told that if I had a cut out it would give more power. Do you think a cut out will give enough extra power to warrant the expense of installing?

It would be wiser to spend the money having your valves ground or possibly even for replacing the piston rings. The cut out has little effect except at high speeds or when the muffler is clogged. Cleaning the muffler will often yield more power.

Why is it detrimental to a storage battery to take solution from one cell and put it in another?

When the solution in the cells of a storage battery gets below the top of the plates under normal conditions the loss of electrolyte is due to evaporation of the water. The acid does not evaporate; hence all that is needed is the addition of more pure water to bring the gravity of the solution to its correct amount. But if you refill with the solution from another cell you are adding acid as well as water, and this makes a solution which has too much acid in proportion to the amount of water. Furthermore if you take acid from one cell and put it in another you are robbing the first cell, as all must have their plates covered completely.

What would be the cause of the second speed gear slipping out when pulling a hill?

It is probable that the second speed plunger has become worn and needs replacing, and it may also be that the spring has become weakened and needs to be replaced with a new extra heavy spring.

I have a 1916 car and have trouble changing from slow to high speed. It jerks, and it seems impossible to start it without racing the engine and making the car first go very fast on low speed. What causes this?

Your clutch is probably slipping. By turning up on the adjusting screws which press against the clutch fingers the trouble will probably be overcome. It is also possible that the screw which presses against the cam on the low portion of the hand lever is set up too high and so does not allow the clutch to engage properly when the lever is down.

When the engine of my car is idle there is a constant dripping from the carburetor, but when running there is not any. The car is all right otherwise and pulls well. I have to shut off the gasoline at night. Can you tell me what the trouble might be?

The trouble is either due to the float valve needle not seating properly or to the float being saturated with gasoline, and so not floating high enough to properly operate the needle valve. See if dirt is under the valve, and then see if the float is saturated with gasoline. If it is dry it out in the sun, and then give it a coating of shellac. Be careful not to bend the arm which holds the needle. If this does not help try grinding in the valve with jeweler's red or rouge mixed with oil.

I notice that in several of the new cars both brakes are not on the rear wheels, but one of them works on the transmission. What are the advantages of this arrangement?

Among the advantages claimed are the following: Since the transmission shaft, to which the brake is applied, runs about four times as fast as the rear axle only about one-quarter the pressure is required with a transmission brake to give the same effect as with a pair of wheel brakes, drum sizes being the same. This permits of a lighter, more easily operated brake being used, one having a shorter operating mechanism which does not move and possibly rattle with the axle. Removing one pair of brakes from the axle slightly reduces the dead weight.

KAFFIR BOYS ARE COMING

The Chautauqua is bringing a company from out of the heart of Africa as the grand closing musical number. The Kaffir Singing Boys and J. H. Balmer are without question the most unique musical attraction in America.

Mr. Balmer has spent twenty years in blackest Africa. He is an Englishman. As a young man he was a government civil engineer in the colonial engineer corps. He had poor health and started out to travel to regain his health. Africa in that day was the great unknown. Seeking adventure as well as health, he went in to the heart of Africa. He had always been interested in children and soon became interested in the children of Africa. He began to investigate their possibilities. The question he soon asked himself was, "Can I train these black, naked little savages in the ways of civilization?" He believed he could by taking them in time, when they were young and plastic. He made a more or less thorough study and investigation of their possibilities, found that it could be done and decided to do it. Feeling that in his own abilities as a teacher he was somewhat limited, he went back to England for study in the Royal Academy of Music.

He finished his course and went back to Africa. He lived the life of the people. He abandoned civilization and became almost a Kaffir. He gave his life to the training of the Bushmen and the Zulu. He trained men and women of all colors and sizes.

After years of patient labor he organized the first Kaffir Singing Boys. It was a living example of the marvelous possibilities in the native tribes. With this company he traveled all through the white centers of Africa, where greater surprise and wonderment were expressed than in the Black Belt. He was commanded to appear with his Singing Boys before the Governor's staff at Cape Town. The Governor and his staff were so impressed they asked for another performance and invited all the governors of Africa. Among them came the Right Hon. Cecil John Rhodes. This performance so inspired Cecil Rhodes that he began at once plans for the establishment of a great normal institution in Africa.

Through the influence of Rhodes and the governors of Africa and others he was commanded to appear in Britain before Queen Victoria. The houses of parliament gave an official reception and tea on the terrace, an event almost unknown in all the history of Britain. He was entertained at the homes of Gladstone and the Duke of Westminster and the Duke of Connaught. He gave 200 nights in London, where they appeared before more than 60,000 people, and ten nights in Belfast, where they appeared before more than 10,000 people. The present Queen of England has been to hear them six times and would promptly recognize them if she saw them on the street today.

The costumes worn by Miss Clark and the boys add much to the interest of their entertainment. These are made of leopard, cheetah, wild deer and skins of other African animals and are ornamented with priceless beadwork. Curious of various kinds also are exhibited. The beadwork in one of Miss Clark's dresses weighs more than twenty pounds. These gorgeous gowns are all made by the men in Africa, and the men of Africa, rather than the women, are the dandies. It is the men who set the fashions.

Balmer's thought is not to encourage the native Africans to come to America. Instead, he tells them to go back to Africa. This they have done and become useful citizens.

He does not know the ages of any

They sing in three languages, although the main part of their program is in English.

Their program is a song and story demonstration of life in Africa, with stories of its resources, its wonders and its tragedies. They sing the songs of their own land. The music given is of a wide range and character. It consists of songs, duets, trios and dramatic native scenes. The songs in English are mostly original and, as has been noted above, form a great part of the program. These are sung with perfect accent and enunciation and with such light and shade as can only be heard in the noted choirs of the world.

This is only one of the many big features the Chautauqua offers. Other musical numbers will be the Royal Blue Hussars Band, with Signor Louis Castelnacci director; the Mendelssohn Sextette, a singing orchestra beautifully costumed; the Tschakowsky Quartet and the Boston Musical Entertainers. The program also includes a Patriotic day, with ex-Governor A. C. Shallenberger of Nebraska principal speaker, and, in addition, the following big lecture numbers: James S. Knox of Cleveland; Dr. E. L. Williams, Chicago's "Fighting Parson"; John Kendrick Bangs, noted literary man, and also Josephine Chilton, southern reader.

A Junior Chautauqua for boys and girls will be a big feature.

Season tickets, selling for $2, may be procured from the local Chautauqua committee.

Do not be deceived by those that talk low prices, for investigation will show that their prices are no lower than elsewhere, or the work and service is inferior.

It is a well known fact that he that cuts the price cuts the quality and service first. Quality and service are the only standard by which to measure values.

Cheap work is the easiest to produce, experience and study are necessary to secure permanency and suitable design.

Service Criticism

In most businesses, where the human element plays an important part, the product can be supervised during manufacture and inspected before delivery.

In the telephone business, the work of our "weavers of speech," although constantly supervised, stands as a finished product. Deficiencies are detected in two ways: first, by our own supervision (which, although strict and constant, necessarily cannot be complete); second, by reports from our customers.

On this inspection and these reports we largely base our plans for service improvements. Therefore, we request telephone users, having service criticisms to make, to notify the chief operator as soon as possible after the occasion for criticism. Almost any error in a toll connection can be ascertained from the records, but a local call loses its identity so quickly as to be practically undiscoverable unless traced AT ONCE.

Constructive criticism is helpful. We welcome it when it is specific—when it describes when, where and how the trouble occurred, and especially when it so closely follows the error as to enable us to place the responsibility therefor and apply the proper corrective.

A devoted wife and mother a kind neighbor and a true friend were the traits that endeared her.

A serious automobile accident, resulting fatally to one number of the automobile party, occurred last Tuesday, when the machine of E. L. Vail, Esq., met with mishap at North Lake.

Mr. Vail was coming from Butterfield's landing, so called, having in his car his wife Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Vail and a child. A portion of the road bed, over which he was traversing, had become weakened by the rains and one side suddenly gave way under them, the car rolling down a small embankment. The passengers, with the exception of F. H. Vail, were caught under the car. The latter jumped and escaped injury.

Mrs. F. H. Vail was badly crushed about the head and chest receiving injuries which proved fatal as she died before she could be brought to her home. E. L. Vail received a broken collar bone. Mrs. E. L. Vail was severely shaken up and received cuts and bruises. The child escaped any injury.

Dr. Ebbett of Hodgdon was near the scene of the accident and rendered prompt medical aid. An ambulance and nurse were summoned from Houlton to render assistance.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, in the Providence of God death has once more entered our midst and taken from us our brother, Grover C. Lloyd, therefore be it

Resolved, That we members of Houlton Grange realize that we have met with a loss that we all must feel deeply and while we feel and know that our brother has gone, we realize as we realize that it is not the end, but the beginning of life for him, and we trust and hope that we may all take warning by our brother's sudden death to be also ready to answer the call of the grim reaper.

Resolved, That we members of Houlton Grange extend our heart felt sympathy to the widowed mother and to the sisters and brothers of our departed brother.

Resolved, That our Charter be draped in mourning for thirty days in honor of our brother, and a copy of these resolutions be sent to the sorrowing family and to the Houlton Times for publication, and they be spread upon our records.

Where are the mighty ones of ages past, Who, o'er the world their inspiration cast, Who's memories stir our spirits like a blast?

Where are the dead? There are no dead! The forms indeed did die.

That caused the ethereal beings now on high, This but the outward covering is thrown by:

This is the dead! The spirits of the lost, of whom we sing, Have perished not; they have but taken wing.

Changing an earthly for a heavenly spring: These are the dead! Thus is all nature perfect. Harmony pervades the whole, by His all wise decree.

With whom are those, to vast infinity, We misname the dead, Committee on Resolutions,

JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA

The Junior Chautauqua to be held in Houlton Aug. 6-10 will be a wonderful time of happiness for those children who are fortunate enough to have a part in it. Every child in Houlton should come and learn the value of good wholesome play, right, directed. The child's play hours, constitute the greater part of the child's waking hours in those first tender years when the character is being moulded. These play hours then should receive much careful consideration. Houlton should have a permanent play ground, and the Junior Chautauqua should open the way for one. The "Play Festival" on the opening night will be a truly joyous time for young and old.

FINANCIAL

(Jasper in Leslie's)

War is a great educator. Those who live in these stirring times are learning lessons rarely taught and that will never be forgotten. For instance, how many of the four million subscribers to the Liberty Loan have bought, for the first time in their lives, an investment bond?

One estimate is that the number of the purchasers of bonds of the smallest denominations (who probably felt impelled by patriotic motives to their first investment in a stable security, instead of leaving their money in savings banks) will approximate one million. Every one of these bondholders, when he receives first payment of interest, will realize that he has made an investment that gives him almost as much of a return as his savings bank, and an investment that has a preference, in some respects, over the savings bank deposit, because it began to receive interest from the date of its purchase, and can always be sold in the open market. It is virtually a greenback bearing interest until it is paid out.

After the war, when these government bonds command, as they will, a very attractive premium and when holders find that they not only receive interest regularly, but also have a good profit on their investment, they will have learned the possibilities of stock market securities and will seek to invest their savings in the best kind of bonds and stocks, in the knowledge that they will not only realize a good rate of interest, but also a speculative profit.

Before the Civil War there were only about 300,000 bondholders in the United States. During that war Government bonds sold around par, and at its close some sold at as high a premium as 30 per cent, so that the fortunate purchaser of a $100 bond bought for $100, after having received his interest regularly, could sell his bond at $130 or better—a very handsome profit.

The distribution of the Liberty bonds by the Government was a great educational lesson, especially for those in distant sections of the land who always look upon Wall Street securities as having the hallmark of the evil one. These victims of their own hallucinations make up a good part of the list of "easy marks" for the promoters of alluring get-rich-quick schemes. They are among those who have in a single year, according to the Post Office authorities, yielded up $150,000,000 to the promoters of fake or experimental automobile, oil, mining, plantation, hotel, patent and similar schemes. Now they have been taught to put their money in the same sort of securities that the Rockefeller, the Carnegies, the Schwabs and all others of the investing class always prefer—first for safety, second for an assured income.

Having gotten into this conservative class, is it too much to believe that they will stay there, and that when they receive, hereafter, alluring prospectuses from the get-rich-quick concerns they will do with them exactly what the Rockefeller, the Carnegies and Schwabs always do, namely, tear them up and throw them into the wastebasket.

If this great war teaches, as it probably will, this lesson of thrift and conservatism, it will do a great thing for the American people. It will teach them that the warfare on honest managed corporations, as the vast majority are, is not justified. It will make them holders of securities of these corporations and give them a personal interest in their welfare. Better than all, it will change them from an attitude of unwarranted hostility to one of fairness and friendship.

When this transformation occurs, the public will have very little patience with a Department of Justice that labors day and night to put every big business man under suspicion or with an Interstate Commerce Commission that seems to believe that its highest duty is to handicap, perplex, and annoy the second greatest industry of the land—our railroads.

No great and wealthy nation that I recall pays as little attention to investment securities as we do. The bulk of the American people are novices in the matter of making investments. They put their money in the savings banks or keep it in their stockings, or some other presumably safe place, when they ought to have it working for them all the while at a good rate of interest.

Nearly everyone who saves a little money in France puts it at once into a good security. It begins to earn for him as soon as he gets it. It doesn't have an idle moment. While he sleeps the bond or stock that he has purchased is making money for him. In this country persons think they are thrifty when they put their money in the savings bank and get 3 1/4 to 4 per cent; yet there is plenty of opportunity to get first-class bonds and other securities that pay 5 and even 6 per cent, and they can always be converted into money just as easily as cash can be withdrawn from the savings bank.

In former days, only big investors could profit by the investment opportunities that Wall Street affords, but now many of the largest and most responsible houses are seeking business in "odd lots" and are offering to buy $100 bonds or a single share of stock costing $100 or thereabouts, and to do this on the installment plan by the payment of $10 down and monthly payments of $5.

It would seem as if every one who seeks to make his money earn something would avail himself of the opportunities for bargains that the stock market affords. The Liberty Loan has opened the way, and hereafter those who have learned how to buy profitable securities will be still more eager to make further ventures. While Americans are the poorest investors in the world, they are among the greatest gamblers. This is the reason they are such "easy marks" for the get-rich-quick concerns.

A NEGLECTED FIELD

Bond experts calculate that there are only about two hundred thousand individual investors in bonds in the United States.

In France, before the war, there were, in round numbers, a million five hundred thousand investors in French Government bonds. Bonds and stocks of French railroads were held by more than seven hundred thousand families. Many other investments in France were widely scattered.

It is fairly probable that France, with two-fifths of our population and far less wealth and income than the United States, had anywhere from eight to ten times as many individual investors in bonds.

It is not because the people of the United States save less than the people of France, for they save far more; nor because they do not invest their savings; but, broadly speaking, their investing custom is totally different from that of France.

The Frenchman with a bit of spare money buys a bond, while the American in like circumstances takes a bank certificate of deposit, or puts his money into land or into his own business. Relatively to the wealth and income of the country, what bankers call securities are distributed within a narrow field. On great occasions, like the Civil War and the Spanish-American War, there is a much wider distribution of government bonds; but in both those instances the bonds soon drifted into comparatively few hands.

Except on such a great occasion there has really never been any effort to popularize investment in bonds in this country. Banks and bond-houses address themselves almost wholly to the limited field known to yield results. They may say that field absorbs all the securities which are offered; but there are various reasons why a wider distribution would be an advantage.

LEST WE FORGET

We have floated a great loan. We have registered ten million young men for military service. Congress has passed a number of the most urgent war measures, and much of the dramatic and spectacular business of organizing the country has been done.

Physically war is as far from us as ever. Nobody threatens our boundaries. Many months must pass before any considerable number of our men engage in actual fighting. It looks like inaction on the East, and steady, dogged push against dogged resistance on the West for the rest of the summer.

The temptation to flag and slacken is obvious. The Government, of course, will go on, at full speed, building ships, buying munitions, organizing and drilling an army; but those activities, for many months to come, will touch the nerves and pulses of the mass of the people but lightly.

Sons, brothers and husbands will still be in their training camps, within easy reach. Even the war taxes will be mostly in anticipation. The raw face-to-face grapple with the realities of war will still be a good way off. It will still be possible for the mass of the people to shut their eyes and imagine that the specter on the horizon will somehow be exorcised; and, after all, their lives can go on in the old pleasant ways, with virtually no real sacrifice.

Probably for many months it will take some imagination to meet this situation intelligently. Government alone cannot meet it. It requires everybody's effort and everybody's sacrifice in such ways as one can give them. For just one comparatively small item, war is attracting so much attention and so much money that the poor at home will suffer unless everywhere there is a quickened interest in them. The man who makes any plan that leaves war out of account is shortsighted and a poor citizen.

BANGOR WOMAN IS ANXIOUS TO HELP; HAS GOOD REASON

Derives Much Good From New Tanlac, Wants Others to Know of it.

"I suffered from a very weak stomach," said Mrs. A. S. Hill of 171 State street, Bangor. "You know what a weak stomach is, I suppose."

"Yes," replied the Tanlac Man. "A weak stomach is not only very disagreeable and injurious, but unless strengthened may develop into something serious."

"But it is no longer weak," Mrs. Hill continued. "Your Tanlac has fixed it up in better shape than it has been in some time. Things are altogether different than they were a short time ago, and I am here to tell you just what your wonderful Tanlac did for me."

"These are the stories we like to hear," the Tanlac Man continued. "We know that the people of Maine will not publicly endorse a medicine or any other product unless they know full well that this medicine should be endorsed."

"As I said in the beginning," Mrs. Hill said, "my stomach was in a very weak condition. I could not retain any food, my appetite was very poor and I had long spells of sour, deathly sickness. I vomited almost continually after eating and I felt miserable both day and night. My nights were restless and I waked up in the morning feeling worse than when I went to bed the night before."

"I saw where people I knew were endorsing Tanlac and I knew they would not do this unless Tanlac was worthy of their praise, so I decided to take it. "I noticed good results at once and I have not vomited once since I started to take Tanlac. My appetite is improving, my stomach is getting much stronger and I am now able to eat regular meals for the first time in a number of months."

"I feel much better throughout the day and when night time comes I am able to sleep eight or nine hours and get up in the morning feeling refreshed. Tanlac is certainly a great medicine and I take pleasure in recommending it to all nervous, weak, run-down men and women."

Tanlac now is being specially introduced in Houlton, by the Hatheway Drug Store.

From Blackest Africa to the Spotlight of Civilization

They are from the heart of Africa. These boys are natives of the Kaffir tribe. They were born in Kaffirland. They were trained to sing while still members of their native tribe. They were brought out of Africa and sang before the King and Queen of England. They sang to 60,000 in London and 40,000 in Liverpool. A reception was given in their honor on the steps of the House of Parliament. They have sung in every state in the Union except three.

J. H. Balmer, a civil engineer, and Miss Elsie Clark of Kaffirland have worked wonders with these little native African boys.

They will appear here as the closing day musical feature of the Chautauqua, wearing the skins of native African animals, and they will give a song and story demonstration of native African life.

Imagination Was at Work.

Two men were reviewing the art exhibition at the Grand Central Palace in New York. One looked at the work critically, but the other fidgeted about and seemed in a hurry to move on or backward or out. Finally his companion heeded his discomfiture. "Don't like the work, eh?" he asked. "No, interest, what?" "I'm interested a bit," answered the fidgety one. "It's not the art I'm complaining of. It's this suit I've on. It's new and all that. Doesn't fit; uncomfortable; conspicuous; hosh!" His companion surveyed him. "Not at all," he said. "Imagination, pure imagination. Looks well, feels bad. That's all. If you don't want people to look at it, wear a top hat and tan shoes. There's always a way, old dear. Always a means, old top. Use your mind, old thing."

Every one of these bondholders, when he receives first payment of interest, will realize that he has made an investment that gives him almost as much of a return as his savings bank, and an investment that has a preference, in some respects, over the savings bank deposit, because it began to receive interest from the date of its purchase, and can always be sold in the open market. It is virtually a greenback bearing interest until it is paid out.

After the war, when these government bonds command, as they will, a very attractive premium and when holders find that they not only receive interest regularly, but also have a good profit on their investment, they will have learned the possibilities of stock market securities and will seek to invest their savings in the best kind of bonds and stocks, in the knowledge that they will not only realize a good rate of interest, but also a speculative profit.

Before the Civil War there were only about 300,000 bondholders in the United States. During that war Government bonds sold around par, and at its close some sold at as high a premium as 30 per cent, so that the fortunate purchaser of a $100 bond bought for $100, after having received his interest regularly, could sell his bond at $130 or better—a very handsome profit.

The distribution of the Liberty bonds by the Government was a great educational lesson, especially for those in distant sections of the land who always look upon Wall Street securities as having the hallmark of the evil one. These victims of their own hallucinations make up a good part of the list of "easy marks" for the promoters of alluring get-rich-quick schemes. They are among those who have in a single year, according to the Post Office authorities, yielded up $150,000,000 to the promoters of fake or experimental automobile, oil, mining, plantation, hotel, patent and similar schemes. Now they have been taught to put their money in the same sort of securities that the Rockefellers, the Carnegies, the Schwabs and all others of the investing class always prefer—first for safety, second for an assured income.

Having gotten into this conservative class, is it too much to believe that they will stay there, and that when they receive, hereafter, alluring prospectuses from the get-rich-quick concerns they will do with them exactly what the Rockefellers, the Carnegies and Schwabs always do, namely, tear them up and throw them into the wastebasket.

If this great war teaches, as it probably will, this lesson of thrift and conservatism, it will do a great thing for the American people. It will teach them that the warfare on honestly managed corporations, as the vast majority are, is not justified. It will make them holders of securities of these corporations and give them a personal interest in their welfare. Better than all, it will change them from an attitude of unwarranted hostility to one of fairness and friendship.

When this transformation occurs, the public will have very little patience with a Department of Justice that labors day and night to put every big business man under suspicion or with an Interstate Commerce Commission that seems to believe that its highest duty is to handicap, perplex, and annoy the second greatest industry of the land—our railroads.

No great and wealthy nation that I recall pays as little attention to investment securities as we do. The bulk of the American people are novices in the matter of making investments. They put their money in the savings banks or keep it in their stockings, or some other presumably safe place, when they ought to have it working for them all the while at a good rate of interest.

Nearly everyone who saves a little money in France puts it at once into a good security. It begins to earn for him as soon as he gets it. It doesn't have an idle moment. While he sleeps the bond or stock that he has purchased is making money for him. In this country persons think they are thrifty when they put their money in the savings bank and get 3½ to 4 per cent; yet there is plenty of opportunity to get first-class bonds and other securities that pay 5 and even 6 per cent, and they can always be converted into money just as easily as cash can be withdrawn from the savings bank.

In former days, only big investors could profit by the investment opportunities that Wall Street affords, but now many of the largest and most responsible houses are seeking business in "odd lots" and are offering to buy $100 bonds or a single share of stock costing $100 or thereabouts, and to do this on the installment plan by the payment of $10 down and monthly payments of $5.

It would seem as if every one who seeks to make his money earn something would avail himself of the opportunities for bargains that the stock market affords. The Liberty Loan has opened the way, and hereafter those who have learned how to buy profitable securities will be still more eager to make further ventures. While Americans are the poorest investors in the world, they are among the greatest gamblers. This is the reason they are such "easy marks" for the get-rich-quick concerns.

A NEGLECTED FIELD

Bond experts calculate that there are only about two hundred thousand individual investors in bonds in the United States.

In France, before the war, there were, in round numbers, a million five hundred thousand investors in French Government bonds. Bonds and stocks of French railroads were held by more than seven hundred thousand families. Many other investments in France were widely scattered.

It is fairly probable that France, with two-fifths of our population and far less wealth and income than the United States, had anywhere from eight to ten times as many individual investors in bonds.

It is not because the people of the United States save less than the people of France, for they save far more; nor because they do not invest their savings; but, broadly speaking, their investing custom is totally different from that of France.

The Frenchman with a bit of spare money buys a bond, while the American in like circumstances takes a bank certificate of deposit, or puts his money into land or into his own business. Relatively to the wealth and income of the country, what bankers call securities are distributed within a narrow field. On great occasions, like the Civil War and the Spanish-American War, there is a much wider distribution of government bonds; but in both those instances the bonds soon drifted into comparatively few hands.

Except on such a great occasion there has really never been any effort to popularize investment in bonds in this country. Banks and bond-houses address themselves almost wholly to the limited field known to yield results. They may say that field absorbs all the securities which are offered; but there are various reasons why a wider distribution would be an advantage.

LEST WE FORGET

We have floated a great loan. We have registered ten million young men for military service. Congress has passed a number of the most urgent war measures, and much of the dramatic and spectacular business of organizing the country has been done.

Physically war is as far from us as ever. Nobody threatens our boundaries. Many months must pass before any considerable number of our men engage in actual fighting. It looks like inaction on the East, and steady, dogged push against dogged resistance on the West for the rest of the summer.

The temptation to flag and slacken is obvious. The Government, of course, will go on, at full speed, building ships, buying munitions, organizing and drilling an army; but those activities, for many months to come, will touch the nerves and pulses of the mass of the people but lightly.

Sons, brothers and husbands will still be in their training camps, within easy reach. Even the war taxes will be mostly in anticipation. The raw face-to-face grapple with the realities of war will still be a good way off. It will still be possible for the mass of the people to shut their eyes and imagine that the specter on the horizon will somehow be exorcised; and, after all, their lives can go on in the old pleasant ways, with virtual no real sacrifice.

Probably for many months it will take some imagination to meet this situation intelligently. Government alone cannot meet it. It requires everybody's effort and everybody's sacrifice in such ways as one can give them. For just one comparatively small item, war is attracting so much attention and so much money that the poor at home will suffer unless everywhere there is a quickened interest in them. The man who makes any plan that leaves war out of account is shortsighted and a poor citizen.

BANGOR WOMAN IS ANXIOUS TO HELP; HAS GOOD REASON

Derives Much Good From New Tanlac, Wants Others to Know of it.

"I suffered from a very weak stomach," said Mrs. A. S. Hill of 171 State street, Bangor. "You know what a weak stomach is, I suppose."

"Yes," replied the Tanlac Man. "A weak stomach is not only very disagreeable and injurious, but unless strengthened may develop into something serious."

"But it is no longer weak," Mrs. Hill continued. "Your Tanlac has fixed it up in better shape than it has been in some time. Things are altogether different than they were a short time ago, and I am here to tell you just what your wonderful Tanlac did for me."

know that the people of Maine will not publicly endorse a medicine or any other product unless they know full well that this medicine should be endorsed."

"As I said in the beginning," Mrs. Hill said, "my stomach was in a very weak condition. I could not retain any food, my appetite was very poor and I had long spells of sour, deathly sickness. I vomited almost continually after eating and I felt miserable both day and night. My nights were restless and I waked up in the morning feeling worse than when I went to bed the night before."

"I saw where people I knew were endorsing Tanlac and I knew they would not do this unless Tanlac was worthy of their praise, so I decided to take it."

"I noticed good results at once and I have not vomited once since I started to take Tanlac. My appetite is improving, my stomach is getting much stronger and I am now able to eat regular meals for the first time in a number of months."

"I feel much better throughout the day and when night time comes I am able to sleep eight or nine hours and get up in the morning feeling refreshed. Tanlac is certainly a great medicine and I take pleasure in recommending it to all nervous, weak, run-down men and women."

Tanlac now is being specially introduced in Houlton, by the Hatheway Drug Store.

From Blackest Africa to the Spotlight of Civilization

They are from the heart of Africa. These boys are natives of the Kaffir tribe. They were born in Kaffirland. They were trained to sing while still members of their native tribe. They were brought out of Africa and sang before the King and Queen of England. They sang to 60,000 in London and 40,000 in Liverpool. A reception was given in their honor on the steps of the House of Parliament. They have sung in every state in the Union except three.

J. H. Balmer, a civil engineer, and Miss Elsie Clark of Kaffirland have worked wonders with these little native African boys.

Imagination Was at Work.

Two men were reviewing the art exhibition at the Grand Central palace in New York. One looked at the work critically, but the other fidgeted about and seemed in a hurry to move on or backward or out. Finally his companion heeded his discomfiture. "Don't like the work, eh?" he asked. "No interest, what?" "I'm interested a bit," answered the fidgety one. "It's not the art I'm complaining of. It's this suit I've on. It's new and all that. Doesn't fit; uncomfortable; conspicuous; bosh!" His companion surveyed him. "Not at all," he said. "Imagination, pure imagination. Looks well, feels bad. That's all. If you don't want people to look at it, wear a top hat and tan shoes. There's always a way, old dear. Always a means, old top. Use your mind, old thing."
